

Joe Kenney, who died last summer in Forestdale, Massachusetts, was a 39-month veteran of World War I, and soon found himself a V5 naval air cadet at Dartmouth. He became a navigator for the naval air arm and served until 1946. Calvin had been active in theater, especially dancing, since he was a child. He performed in many camp shows while in the Navy and spent a year after discharge in a successful professional dance act before returning to Dartmouth to major in art history and pursue all types of dance. After Dartmouth he worked with American Airlines in the Boston area, then returned to New York to establish a business brokering mailing lists. He is survived by sister Jane Dickinson.

Vincent John Marriott died March 21 at Duke University Hospital, after suffering a stroke at his home in Pinehurst, North Carolina. Vince came to Hanover after attending Verona (New Jersey) High School. He majored in sociology, lettered in football and was a member of Beta Theta Pi and Sphinx. He served with the Army Counter Intelligence Corps in Germany 1952-55, then began a quarter-century career with Continental Can Co., serving a tour in Belgium and becoming executive vice president of Continental Group International. He later became chairman of Silgan Plastics Corp. Vince is survived by his wife, Isabel; sons Vincent 79, Christopher 82, Michael 84 and Thomas; and daughters Arlene and Mary.

1952

John B. Adams Jr. died March 8 in Morristown, New Jersey, after a long illness. Jack came to Dartmouth from Montclair High School in New Jersey. He majored in psychology and was an active member of Kappa Kappa Kappa. After graduation Jack served in the Army, with significant time spent in Europe. His career began with Southeastern Public Service Co. in Florida. He later became a business consultant in the northern New Jersey area and continued in that pursuit until his death. Among Jack's favorite pleasures was boating on Lake George with family and friends. The occasional Caribbean cruise with Dartmouth friends were also high on his list. Jack will be greatly missed by all who knew him. Jack is survived by wife, Lynn, son Jack III, daughter Crisanne, grandson Sean and sister Ann.

Ray Hinds died of cancer in January at his home in New Castle, New Hampshire. He lived with the disease for eight years. Ray had a cutting-edge job in the development of nuclear power generation as a manager of nuclear materials at the high-profile Yankee Plant on the New Hampshire coast. His last job was director of fuel procurement for New Hampshire Public Service Co. Ray lived on the New Hampshire coast and in his home state of Massachusetts with Joanne, his wife of 45 years, and children Judith, Holly and Daniel, who predeceased Ray. Ray is survived by five grandchildren and a host of Dartmouth friends, including roommate Ed Finerty 52, who said "He was a great guy, and knew many of his classmates."

Earl Calvin Groves died December 13, 2000, in New York City, where he had resided for more than 40 years. He had Parkinson's disease and cancer. Calvin graduated from Salem (Massachusetts) High School in the midst of World War I, and soon found himself a V5 naval air cadet at Dartmouth. He became a navigator for the naval air arm and served until 1946. Calvin had been active in theater, especially dancing, since he was a child. He performed in many camp shows while in the Navy and spent a year after discharge in a successful professional dance act before returning to Dartmouth to major in art history and pursue all types of dance. After Dartmouth he worked with American Airlines in the Boston area, then returned to New York to establish a business brokering mailing lists. He is survived by sister Jane Dickinson.

Ray Hinds died of cancer in January at his home in New Castle, New Hampshire. He lived with the disease for eight years. Ray had a cutting-edge job in the development of nuclear materials at the high-profile Yankee Plant on the New Hampshire coast. His last job was director of fuel procurement for New Hampshire Public Service Co. Ray lived on the New Hampshire coast and in his home state of Massachusetts with Joanne, his wife of 45 years, and children Judith, Holly and Daniel, who predeceased Ray. Ray is survived by five grandchildren and a host of Dartmouth friends, including roommate Ed Finerty 52, who said "He was a great guy, and knew many of his classmates."

Philemon N. Hoadley died on January 21 at the Calvary Hospital in New York City. Phil came to Dartmouth after graduating from Montclair (New Jersey) High School and a stint in the Navy. He was a member of DU fraternity and the Foley House, sang in the Glee Club and majored in English. After graduation he joined the National City Bank, later Citicorp, in New York City. Phil worked his entire career there as an officer of

1951

Richard H. Trump died at the Buffalo (New York) General Hospital on March 14 after a brief illness. Dick came to Dartmouth from Riverside High in Milwaukee, Wisconsin. He majored in history, was active in WDBS and served as vice president of the Dartmouth Christian Union. After receiving his divinity degree from the University of Chicago Theological Seminary, he served in churches in Ohio and Wisconsin before 20 years as minister of the Salem United Church of Christ in Tonawanda, New York. In retirement he had been serving part-time at Christ Church of Buffalo. His love for and dedication to his work was reflected in his words in our 50th reunion book: "One shares great moments in people's lives." Dick served as an enrollment volunteer and as a class agent. Three brothers attended Dartmouth: Roger 38 (deceased), Thomas 41 and William 46 (deceased). Dick is survived by wife Joan, children Joy and David and two granddaughters.

George Williams Reid died on December 15, 2000, in Racine, Wisconsin. Bill came to Dartmouth from the DeVaux Military Academy after three years in the Navy. He majored in government, was a member of DUD and Bones Gate and was active in Bat & Buller. After graduation he received his law degree from Cornell and then worked in private practice for several years. He went into corporate law with Glidden Paint and Western Publishing Co., retiring from the latter as general counsel and secretary in 1980. Bill is survived by his wife, Jean, and children William and Karen.

Norman Leslie Scruton died in January in Keisno, Washington. Prior to coming to Dartmouth he had graduated from Gordon College, and later served as the pastor of a number of parishes in the New England area. He then moved to the Northwest and served in several congregational churches and conferences. He was active in the Masons, Ganges and various farm organizations and affiliated with a rural pastor's fellowship. He is survived by his wife, Marion, daughters Naomi and Kathy and son Tony.

1950

James Hueston Smith of Exeter, New Hampshire, died this January after a brief illness. Spike was born in Milwaukee, graduated from New Trier High School in Winnetka, Illinois, and then came to Dartmouth. He was a member of the Dartmouth Outing Club and Theta Delta Chi. He went on to graduate from Tuck School in the class of '50. From there he served from 1951 to 1953 in the Air Force as a lieutenant. He started his career with American Hospital Supply Corp., moved to management consulting with Cresap McCormack and Wang in New York and also worked for the Encyclopaedia Britannica and Wang Corp. In 1973 he founded his own company, Lernco Inc. in Exeter, and served as chairman and chief executive officer until his death. Survivors include brother Jackson 54, daughters Debora and Marlena and sons Gregory, Tu 87 and Bryan.

William Mortimer Norwood died in July 2000 of a heart attack in the Beverly, Massachusetts, hospital. "Dad" lived in Ipswich, Massachusetts, and years in the Navy. He majored in government, was a member of DUD and Bones Gate and was active in Bat & Buller. After graduation he received his law degree from Cornell and then worked in private practice for several years. He went into corporate law with Glidden Paint and Western Publishing Co., retiring from the latter as general counsel and secretary in 1980. Bill is survived by his wife, Jean, and children William and Karen.

the bank in various aspects of advertising, public relations, marketing and management. He and Phyllis lived in Douglastown, a small community on Long Islands North Shore, and they had a summer house on Nantucket. Their two daughters also have strong Hanover ties: Dr. Debbie, a Smith graduate, did her junior year at Dartmouth and later did her residency at Mary Hitchcock Hospital, and Jenny is an 81.