

During WWII he was a pilot of B17s in the Army Air Corps. He earned a doctorate in anthropology from Harvard University, was curator of the Tyler Museum of the Colorado Springs Fine Arts Center and taught at Lake Forest College. He is survived by wife Florence.

George Philip Schneider Jr. died July 11, 1998, in a Jackson, Miss. hospital. He graduated from White Plains (N.Y.) High School. George majored in chemistry-zoology and was member of Germania and the gym team. He received a medical degree from Long Island School of Medicine. He was president of the medical staff of Lake Charles Memorial Hospital and a member of the American Academy of Orthopedic Surgeons. He is survived by sons Philip and Steve and daughters Jane and Ann.

Wilbur Francis Shea died June 2, 1998, at home in Clermont, Fla. He came to Dartmouth from Flushing High School, graduated from Tuck in 1941, and attended Harvard Business School. He was a member of DKE. Bill served in the navy from April 1942 until December 1945, retiring as a lieutenant. He was employed as treasurer of T.J. Ronan Co. Inc., Allstate Insurance Co., and Brooklyn Savings Bank. He is survived by daughters Toni and Maureen and five grandchildren.

Kenneth Clark Steele died July 11, 1998, at St. Luke's Memorial Hospital Center in Utica, N.Y., after a long illness. Ken came to Dartmouth from Springfield (Mass.) Classical High School. He was a member of Sigma Chi, Phi Beta Kappa, Green Key, Glee Club Board of Governors, and manager of freshman football. He graduated from Yale University School of Medicine and served as captain in the U.S. Army Medical Corps. Ken retired from surgical practice with the Slocum-Dickson Medical Group but remained active in medical affairs. He is survived by his wife, Martha Nickerson Steele, and children Kenneth, Peter, Carol, Joanne, and Robert.

1942

Richard E. Bolton died on September 23, 1998, at Albany (N.Y.) Medical Center after a long illness. He was a former counsel to the New York State Police, retiring in 1980; Rensselaer County assistant district attorney; and assistant U.S. attorney. Richard was a second lieutenant in the U.S. Air Corps during WWII and graduated from Albany Law School. He started his law career in 1947 at the firm of Filley and Bolton in Troy, N.Y., was a partner in Bolton and Landry in Troy, then in Albany's Zweig and Bolton and in private practice before joining the New York State Police. He was an instructor, a lecturer, and a fine athlete who earned five gold medals in swimming in the New York State Police Olympics in 1969 and 1980. He is survived by his wife of 55 years, Marian; sons Richard, Jeffrey, and Peter; three daughters-in-law; nine grandchildren; and a great-grandson.

1943

Robert Dugald Pearson died June 2, 1998, at Meridia Euclid (Ohio) Hospital. He attended Shaker Heights High School before entering Dartmouth, where he was a member of Sigma Alpha Epsilon. On graduation he entered the Army Air Corps and was a staff sergeant at time of discharge. He earned a law degree from Western Reserve in 1948 and for three years worked in the Cleveland Law Department before entering private law practice. He was a member of the Ohio Bar Association and provided legal services to the Cleveland Athletic Club, a sportsman and skeet shooting club in Pepper Pike. He enjoyed fishing and hunting as well. He is survived by daughter Priscilla "P.J." McC children.

Richard Barrett Smith died July 11, 1998, in Newport Beach, Calif. Dick was a student at Dartmouth in 1941 when he joined the Naval Air Corps. Honorably discharged in 1945, he returned to school at the University of Washington, earning a B.A. degree in 1947. His business career included logging, sales, and custom-home building until he founded Broadmoor Homes in the late 1950s. A prominent Orange County businessman, Dick was the recipient of many honors as a West Coast builder, and he was inducted into the Home Builders Hall of Fame in 1983. In addition to his many building industry activities and honors, Dick was a director of the Boy Scouts of America, Orange County Chapter. He is survived by his wife, Betty Jane Smith, daughters Susan and Becky, stepson Dennis, three granddaughters, and three grandsons.

1948

John Richard Mahoney died in an automobile accident in Ft. Lauderdale, Fla., May 29, 1998, not long before he and wife Marilyn were to be headed north for his 50th Reunion. He arrived on campus with the July 1944 V-5 contingent and went on to pre-flight training before he was released early in 1946. Returning to campus, he crammed on pre-med courses, joined Delta Upsilon, band, and Handel Society. His senior undergraduate year was his first year of medical school, and he completed his two years with DMS class of 1949 and was awarded his M.D. from Tufts in 1951. He specialized in orthopaedic medicine. He was very active in alumni and DMS alumni affairs, returning to Hanover frequently—particularly when daughter Lynn '87 was on campus. He is survived by her, Marilyn, and their other children, John, Ellen, David, Andrew, and Dana.

John Wentworth Parker a descendant of Royal Governor Wentworth, who attended Dartmouth's first graduation in the 1770s when Eleazar still presided, died of complications from heart disease and diabetes in Connecticut's Hartford Hospital on July 17, 1997. Jack came to Dartmouth out of St. George's School during the summer semester of WWII year 1944, when he was one of 166 civilians who matriculated and lived in Crosby, Richardson, and Wheeler. He was an active undergrad, joined SAE, majored in history, and was handed his diploma in the Bema in June 1948 by President Dickey. After a short period with Proctor & Gamble in Ohio, Jack spent his entire working life as a technical illustrator in Connecticut, mostly with Pratt & Whitney Aircraft, then Universal Design Inc., both in Hartford. Jack married Nancy Jewett of Manchester, Conn., in 1955. They lived mostly in Andover and had three children before a later divorce. Jack, an accomplished rifleman and painter of sea and landscape, is survived by daughters Sarah and Susan, both of whom are married, and by son John W. Jr.

1950

Edward Leeds Gulick died at his home in Winthrop, Maine, on June 3, 1998. He came to Dartmouth from Deerfield Academy. He majored in earth sciences and geology, played fresh-man's basketball for the Gamma Fund and most recently as a class agent. Dartmouth Gulicks include his grandfather, father '13, an uncle, brother Peter '55, niece Cynthia '80, and nephew Stephen '81. He is survived by his wife, Judy MacKeigan, ten children, and five grandchildren.

Alan Richard Kerivan died of a heart attack on June 26, 1998, at his home in Birmingham, Mich. Spif came to Dartmouth from Wellesley, Mass., after serving in the navy in the V-5 program. He was a history major; a member of Psi U, Casque & Gauntlet, and the Newman Club; and he played hockey. Spif was selected for the College All-Star team and played in the NCAA finals in 1948 and 1949. After graduation he joined Owens Corning Fiberglass, where he worked in marketing for 24 years and become an executive vice president, and that was followed by a vice presidency with Rockwell International. In 1977 he founded his own company, the ARK group, which sold products to the auto, appliance, electronic, and defense industries. Spif is survived by his wife, Jane, three sons, a daughter, four grandchildren, and three brothers.

1951

Warren Arthur Stearns died August 24, 1998, at a nursing home in Swainton, N.J. He suffered from multiple myeloma. Warren came to Dartmouth from Bridgeport, Conn. He majored in government and participated in the International Relations and German clubs. His career was in industrial engineering and management consulting, and he lived and worked much of that time in Elkins Park, Pa. He retired in 1987 and moved to Ocean City, N.J. He is survived by daughters Pamela Stearns DeVito and Laura Stearns and son Warren Stearns Jr.

Joseph Philip Boissy died unexpectedly of a heart attack September 14, 1998, while undergoing some routine medical tests at his local hospital in Lowville, N.Y. Joe grew up in Greenfield, Mass., and attended Hebron Academy. At Dartmouth he chose Tuck School, was a member of Sigma Chi and Dragon, and played on the golf team. The Korean War drew him into the air force for several years, most of it in Washington, D.C., where he met and married Rosalee Haviland and earned a master's degree at George Washington University. In 1955 he moved to Lowville to join Payne-Jones Inc., a small privately held firm manufacturing special bookbinding material used widely in the United States and abroad. He rose to become executive vice president before the company was folded into Boise-Cascade nearly 25 years later. He was a pillar of the First Presbyterian Church, served three terms on the school board, sat on the St. Lawrence Bank advisory committee, and was treasurer of Friends of Lewis County Hospice. In addition to Rosalee, he is survived by daughters Dr. Leslee Boissy, Amy B. Penn, and Barbara Rowand.

1953

John W. Morgan died of cancer in Gloucester, Mass., on September 1, 1997. Following graduation from Dartmouth's Thayer School of Engineering, Jack began his engineering career with the New England Electric System and