

Taft School in New Bedford. His military service in the Air Force and Air Transport Command took him to New Jersey, Colorado, California, Ascension Island, and Brazil. He received decorations for his service in both the American and Middle East Theaters. Elliott's business career included employment with Metropolitan Life and National Cash Register Companies. At Dartmouth he participated in tennis and golf. He belonged to several rod and gun clubs, the NRA, and the National Wildlife Federation.

1945

William Dueringer NeNeely

of Cape Coral, Fla., died of cancer on March 28. He entered Dartmouth from Summit (N.J.) High School, majored in economics, and was a member of Alpha Delta Phi. His Dartmouth education was interrupted from 1943 to 1945 by WW II.

During a career in marketing he was affiliated at various times with Booz, Allen & Hamilton, Toro Corp., Jacobsen Mfg. Corp., and Atlanta-Lasalle Corp. He completed his career as a management consultant. He attended the class's 40th Reunion.

He is survived by his wife, Joan, three children, and a cousin, Andrea Kormann '77.

1947

Robert W. Owens

of Otisfield, Maine, died June 2 after a long illness with cancer. Bob came to Hanover in the summer of 1943 with the Navy V-12 program. After service as an ensign in WW II he completed his studies, graduating in 1948.

He worked in computer sales and as a consultant for Valcom in Portland for several years. He was a former president of the Falmouth and Bethel Little Leagues, and he gave much of his time to community service. He is survived by Mildred, his wife of 45 years, and by their four sons.

1949

Robert Henry Tillson

died at Newton-Wellesley Hospital on May 18. Bob came to Dartmouth from Vermont Academy and was a member of Delta Tau Delta. His father was in the class of 1920, and his brother was a '50.

He worked for many years with the Harvard Trust Company.

Bob is survived by his wife, Ruth, and four children.

Daniel Jay Raabin

died April 5, 1991, of respiratory failure in Salt Lake City, Utah. Dan graduated from Dartmouth and Tuck in 1950. He was a member of Delta Upsilon and managed the squash team.

He worked for Intercontinental Apparel as sales manager for the Pierre Cardin line and then started his own business.

He developed a brain tumor that incapacitated him in 1979, but in spite of this he continued to pursue his interest in business as chairman of the board of the Croton Toxic Company.

Dan is survived by his and Victoria.

195

Forrest Ray Adams Jr.

died December 19. Ray came to Dartmouth from Vermont Academy. After graduation he was with the International Paper Company for more than 25 years in a variety of technical positions. He later joined a small firm in Proctor, Vt. After retiring in 1988 he maintained a consulting business in Beaver River, N.Y. Ray is survived by his sons William and James, daughter Kathryn, and three stepchildren. His father was in the class of 1919.

Kenneth Holland Little

of Reading, Mass., died of cancer April 18. Ken was one of six members of the Little family to attend Dartmouth. His son, brother, brother-in-law, and nephews have all been active as undergraduates and alumni. Ken was already a five-year army veteran when he matriculated, having participated in the Normandy invasion. He was discharged a first lieutenant but returned to active duty in Korea as captain. While an undergraduate he was Theta Chi and chairman of Winter Carnival's Outdoor Evening for two years. After graduation he held several engineering and management positions in New York City, Concord, N.H., and in the greater Boston area until founding K.H. Little Inc. in 1975. He specialized in the design of computerized management-information systems throughout the U.S. Ken is survived by his wife of 34 years, Elaine, who is past president of the Dartmouth Women's Club of Boston. Also surviving are their daughter, two sons including Christopher '85, and three grandchildren.

Robert Jerome Lyon

died February 1. Bob came to Dartmouth from White Plains, N.Y. His father was a '24, his brother David a '54, and he had a cousin and a nephew in more recent classes. He was a member of the DOC and Gamma Delta Chi.

After graduation Bob worked for Bankers Trust, Standard Oil (N.J.), and the Florida State Employment Service before returning to the family medical business in Buffalo, N.Y. The business was sold to Union Carbide in 1984, but he stayed on until retiring in 1989. During recent years he devoted his leisure to traveling, breeding Cockatiels, and helping young people "over the bumps in life." He had a major coronary in 1990 and suffered from "a touch of emphysema" but still claimed to "enjoy every minute of the day." Bob leaves his second wife, Lillian, of Clearwater, Fla., six children, and eight grandchildren.

Roy Skofield Reynolds

died October 10, 1991, in Arlington, Va. Roy was already a midshipman in the Naval Reserve when he came to Dartmouth. He graduated with the class and was immediately commissioned. Roy spent 27 years in the navy, serving in the Western Pacific, attending CIC Officers' School in Glenview, Ill., and teaching at Marquette College. While at Marquette, Roy started studies for a law degree. He served in Europe and later had assignments with the Pentagon, the Armed Forces Staff College, and served in Vietnam, where he was awarded the Joint Services Commendation Medal by

Kenneth H Little

4-18-92

and Ray. He is also survived by his mother, Mrs. Deck Reynolds of Arlington.

1952

Thomas Rex Ellerbe

died of complications from a liver transplant and pancreatic cancer on May 13 in Los Angeles. He had loved Dartmouth and had hoped to return to live in New England.

He was the 1952 undergraduate class secretary for three years, a modified art major, and a member of Phi Lambda Phi. Following an air force tour in Germany, Tom took a degree in civil engineering from Howard University in 1962. He received an M.B.A. from California State in 1974.

The Rocketdyne Division of North American Aviation Company took him to California, where he remained until his retirement from Hughes Aircraft Company as manager of quality engineering in 1990. Tom was very involved in his class and later his community.

He is survived by his three daughters.

1953

A. Donald Williams III

died of a heart attack December 17, 1991. Don was a member of Phi Sigma Kappa and the Outing Club, city editor of the Daily D, and a geography major. Don graduated with distinction and later undertook advanced studies at New York University and the New School for Social Research, receiving his M.A. in 1975. He then went on to pursue doctoral studies. For most of his business career Don was a computer-systems analyst with several major New York area corporations. He retired from Time Inc. as a systems analyst in 1986 but continued his independent consulting work.

Don was a loyal and effective class agent and was active in the Dartmouth Club of Westchester and many community organizations in Larchmont, his home for more than 30 years. Don leaves a brother, Andrew Post.

1956

Robert Henry Castles

of Garden City, N.Y., died April 12 following a short illness. Bob entered Dartmouth from Garden City High School. While at Dartmouth Bob was a member of Gamma Delta Chi and the varsity swimming team. He graduated from Tuck in 1957 and joined Arthur Young & Co., where he remained until his death.

Bob rose quickly in the firm, being appointed manager of the tax department in 1960, a principal of the firm in 1966, and partner in 1968. He was national director of expatriate services (1980-85), and at the time of his death Bob was the national director and New York Metro Region director of valuation services of the merged firm of Ernst & Young. He is survived by his wife, Janet, and two children. —Kenneth A. Geary Jr. '56