

many years predeceased him. He is survived by daughter Meredith Shattuck Kecken, son Tracy Richard Shattuck, and two grandchildren.

1944

Howard Lee Gilman chairman and CEO of the Gilman Paper Co., died of a heart attack January 3, 1998, while visiting a company plantation in Florida. He was a philanthropist and patron of dance and other visual arts. A native of Manhattan and Gilman, Vt., Howard came to Hanover from Horace Mann School, and at Dartmouth he was elected to Phi Beta Kappa. After navy service during WWII, he joined the family paper company. In 1964 the Gilman family gave to Dartmouth the Charles Gilman Life Sciences Laboratory building, and Howard subsequently gave time and funds to Hopkins Center and other causes in the Upper Valley. The Howard Gilman foundation provided the endowment for the Metropolitan Museum's first permanent gallery dedicated exclusively to photography. He was predeceased by brother Charles '52 and is survived by his mother.

1945

Roger Clifton Cantwell Jr. died April 23, 1997, in Madison, Wisc., a victim of several years of heart disease and diabetes. An original member of '45, Roger left Dartmouth in December 1942 to join the army. After serving in several European campaigns, he returned home in 1946 and enrolled in the University of Wisconsin. Graduating in 1948, Roger began a lifelong career in journalism, serving first as sports editor of a small daily in his hometown of Shawano, Wisc. He then went on to a tenure of more than 30 years with the Wisconsin State Journal in Madison. He retired as news editor in 1985. His colleagues regarded him as a "wonderful role model for a generation of reporters and editors." Roger is survived by his wife of 53 years, Kathryn, son Michael, and daughter Mary.

1948

Wilcomb Edward Washburn died of prostate cancer at his home in Washington, D.C., on February 1, 1997, wife Kathryn at his side. A native of Hanover and son of a Dartmouth professor, Wid was valedictorian of his class at Exeter, graduated from Dartmouth in 1948 summa cum laude, and earned a Ph.D. at Harvard under Samuel Eliot Morison. He also was a U.S. Marine, served under General MacArthur in Japan after WWII, and became a colonel in the Marine Corps Reserve. He became a renowned historian, archaeologist, anthropologist, and teacher, and was an official at the Smithsonian for many years, specializing in American studies, particularly the American Indian, of which he became an acknowledged authority. He wrote extensively, publishing six books and innumerable articles. Wid is survived by second wife Kathryn, son Alexandros by his first wife, and brother John '45.

1949

Francis H. Blanc died of lung cancer on December 26, 1997, in Pittsburgh, leaving his wife of 41 years, Jean, brother Rene '50, nine nieces and nephews, and many friends. Born in New York City, Frank was raised in Scarsdale, N.Y., and attended Dartmouth after serving in the U.S. Air Force. He was a member of Phi Delta Theta and of the crew. Frank's career was in finance and investment counseling with McKelvey & Co., Lionel D. Edie, the Pittsburgh National Bank, and, at the time of his death, Northridge Investment Co. A resident Frank enjoyed tennis. He was regar as "Mr. Cool."

Edward Nagel Marcu of Alpharetta, Ga., died last Novem. cer. He is survived by his wife, Barbara, and children Moira, Katherine, Edward III, and William. Ed came to Dartmouth from Grosse Pointe Shores, Mich., via the Navy V-12 program. After earning his Dartmouth B.A. he went on to study architecture at Yale. We have little information on his later career.

1951

Edwin Mansfield died of cancer at his home in Wallingford, Pa., on Nov. 17, 1997, after a distinguished academic career in economics. After Dartmouth Ed received his M.A. and Ph.D. degrees from Duke and proceeded to teach at Carnegie-Mellon, Yale, Harvard, and Cal Tech. In 1964 he became professor of economics at the University of Pennsylvania and remained on the faculty until just before his death. He was an internationally known analyst on technological change and since 1985 had headed Penn's Center for Economics and Technology. He wrote 200 articles and 20 books, some of them adopted as texts at more than 1,000 U.S. colleges and many abroad as well. Ed came to Dartmouth from Weehawken, N.J., High School, was a member of Delta Upsilon, and attended Tuck School. He is survived by his wife, Lucile, son Edward, daughter Elizabeth, and one granddaughter.

1952

Kenneth M. Moran who died September 22, 1997, in an automobile accident, had an unhappy experience with dorm and roommates and left Dartmouth after three or four months, according to his brother, Dr. John Moran '54. "Nowadays Ken could have been saved for Dartmouth by counseling," John noted. Nevertheless, Ken lived a very productive life, which adds luster to the class. He graduated from the University of North Dakota and from North Dakota Law School at the top of his class and had a successful law practice. He is survived by children Kenneth, Timothy, and Danielle.

1961

Anthony Lawrence Field who hosted several class dinners in recent years at his Freegrace Leavitt Tavern Restaurant in Hartford, Vt., and whose passionate views of art placed him at the heart of class discussions about the Frost statue at our 35th Reunion, died on October 9, 1997. Though he did many other things during his life after Dartmouth, including operating the restaurant and bed and breakfast, Tony was at root an art professional, working at galleries and art museums in France and elsewhere. After graduation from Dartmouth, where he majored in French and Italian literature and minored in the history of art, he took further courses on the history of art at Ecole du Louvre in Paris, and attended art expert school in Paris. He also was active for Dartmouth, serving as president and club liaison officer of the Dartmouth Alumni Club of France. He is survived by wife Therese and children Alexandra and Laetitia.

1963

David A. Downey a former marine captain and Manchester, N.H., businessman, died November 30, 1997, at the Manches-

Edwin Mansfield

11-17-97

became a marine corps aviator and commanded a battery in an amphibious assault in Vietnam. Downey earned an M.B.A. from Tuck, was treasurer of the Autex Corp., and founder of Technical Mutual Services, a mutual fund. He was married to the late Barbara Ann Bartles of Hanover. Downey is survived by Mary Shea Downey, son Brendan C. Downey, daughter Tanya M. Boisvert, and brothers Paul K. Downey and Jude B. Downey.

1964

James Aloysius Feeley Jr. died of throat cancer on October 19, 1997 at Deaconess Hospital in Boston. Originally from Milford, Conn., Jim left school for two years and graduated in 1966. He majored in history and was a member of Phi Gamma Delta and Sphinx. He also played football during his freshman year. After graduating from Dartmouth Jim spent his entire career in the securities industry, serving as CEO and director of W. S. Prescott and Co., Boston, and he also worked for Clayton Polleys and Co., Boston, and Bank East Discount Brokerage Services in New Hampshire. At the time of his death he was president and chairman of J. A. Feeley and Associates in Needham, Mass. He is survived by his companion, Rita M. Schulz, daughter Traci McCormack, sons James and Michael, and three grandchildren.

1973

Paul Hans Ulbrich died on May 10, 1997, in Honolulu, Hawaii, a victim of a random, unprovoked assault and mortal wounds inflicted by a mentally unbalanced, fugitive parolee. Known during his years at the College as "Peter," he came to Hanover from Richmond, Va., where he attended Jefferson High School. Paul majored in sociology and spent about a dozen years following graduation in the creative arts, principally as an avant garde jazz musician. He embarked on a career as a research scientist and, after studying at the University of Arizona, received an M.S. in 1988, writing his thesis on artificial intelligence in medicine. He is survived by his parents, Dr. and Mrs. Walter H. Ulbrich, and a sister.

1988

Karen Avenoso died peacefully February 25, 1998, at her home in Westfield, N.J., after a nine-month fight against cancer. She was treasured by all who knew her. An English major from Long Island, Karen served as senior class president and founded the Women's Issues Forum at Dartmouth, where she received the Lockwood prize for best writing by a junior and the Katherine Booth Brock Award for community involvement. She later won a Rhodes Scholarship to Oxford University, where she completed a master's degree in English literature, and went on to a career in journalism. At the time of her death, Karen was an education writer for The Boston Globe, inspiring colleagues there with her talent, energy, and compassion. Doctors diagnosed a lump near her spine in May 1997 as a Ewing's sarcoma, a rare cancer usually found in children. Two weeks later, Karen married Jonathan Sherman, to whom she had been planning a September wedding.