

ics, the director of the Foreign Service Institute, and a special assistant on economic and European affairs. After retiring he was a visiting lecturer at Princeton, and he helped edit the writings of former Deputy Secretary George W. Ball and others.

He is survived by his wife, Rosalind, his son George '80, a daughter, and two grandchildren.

Peter Dewitt Weston

died of cancer January 13. Pete came to Dartmouth from Wilton, Conn. After three years in the army during WW II, he earned a master's degree in languages at Middlebury College. He taught briefly in schools in Virginia and North Carolina before joining the staff at Oxford Academy in Pleasantville, N.J., and he taught there and at Friend's School in Atlantic City until his retirement.

He was active in the Christ Episcopal Church and was an ardent railroad buff with an extensive collection of model trains and books on railroading.

He is survived by his wife, Virginia, a son and a grandson.

1948

Harry Lewis Shaw Jr.

died of cancer February 11 in Lancaster, Calif. Harry came to Dartmouth from New Haven School and was in the Navy V-12 before serving in WW II. Harry attended the University of Connecticut's Hartford Law School and worked for the Indemnity Insurance Co. of North America. In 1951 he joined the F.B.I. and was a special agent in Washington, D.C., Chicago, and California. He was employed by the Lockheed Corporation in 1953 and retired after 33 years of service as director of industrial relations. He was assigned to Lockheed's highly classified U-2 program.

Harry was a member of the Palmdale City Council, president of the Kiwanis and of the Supporters of the Palmdale Regional Airport, and director of the Palmdale Hospital, Board of Trade, and Chamber of Commerce.

At Dartmouth he was a member of Theta Delta Chi and an enthusiastic DOC "chubber." He was district enrollment director and an Alumni Fund class agent for many years.

He is survived by his wife, Myrna, two daughters, four grandchildren, and two sisters.
—Lloyd T. Krumm Jr. '48

1949

Robert Davis Williams

died of a massive heart attack in a doctor's office on February 4. Bob was born in Needham, Mass. He attended Rivers Country Day School and served several years in the army in WW II before entering Dartmouth.

His career involved medical sales, yacht brokering, and real estate in the Annapolis area.

He was a prime mover in the Severn Sailing Association and taught sailing at the Annapolis Sailing Club.

His grandfather, father, and brother Chester S. Williams '41 were graduates of Dartmouth. He is survived by his Dutch-born wife, Carla, son Russell, two daughters, nine grandchildren, brother Chester, and sisters Elizabeth Ivins and Helen Southard.

19

John P Mernan
1-7-93

James S.

died of cancer April 12, 1992, in Pittsburgh. He graduated from Culver Military Academy and served a stint in the marines before entering Dartmouth. He majored in history and was a member of Gamma Delta Chi. Jim worked as a salesman for Jones & Laughlin Steel Corp. after graduation and later was in the securities business. His father, James Shirley Austin, was class of 1924. Jim leaves a wife, Ann, and two children.

Charles W. Hamilton Jr.

died on January 4. He resided in New York City. In 1987 he retired from Bellevue Psychiatric Hospital, where he had been a teacher and rehabilitation technician working with autistic children.

Charlie came to Dartmouth from Montclair (N.J.) High School. He was active in the Dartmouth Players, majored in sociology, and was a member of Sigma Phi Epsilon.

After graduation he taught English at the American University of Beirut, Lebanon, for several years. Prior to going to work at Bellevue he was an actor, singer, and the business manager for the Circle in the Square Theatre in New York. Charlie is survived by a brother, Robert D., and two sisters, Irene Winner and Jean Parsons.

1951

John Paul Mernan

came to Dartmouth from Buffalo, and that is where he died on January 7 after a long illness. He earned his M.D. at the State University of New York, stayed in Buffalo throughout his internship and residency, and then practiced general surgery there the rest of his life.

John is remembered by his Chi Phi roommate as a positively brilliant student for whom learning seemed effortless.

He is survived by his wife, Dr. Winnifred Mernan, and two sons.

1954

Norman Robert Bander

died February 17 of unknown causes in Sarasota, Fla. He came to Dartmouth from the Carteret School in West Orange, N.J., and was very active with WDBS radio, becoming program director in his junior year. We know little of his activities since graduation, the most recent information being that he was a management consultant in marketing, advertising, and marketing research in the Sarasota area. Norm was single and there is no known next of kin.

Charles Wetzel Dorries Jr.

died of cancer in 1986, we recently learned. He did not graduate with the class, but continued his education at the University of Michigan and went on to work with Grumman Aircraft as a mechanical engineer. He is survived by his wife, Marie, of Whitehall, Pa.

Irwin Maer Herrman

died October 24, 1992, in Australia, where he had lived and worked for many years. He tion and Arab-Israeli conflict, and he published numerous articles and papers on the subject. As an educator in Australia, he was director of the Footscray Institute of Technology and was a key figure in negotiating the Institute's merger with the Western Institute to form Victoria University of Technology. In 1991 he was appointed the university's deputy vice chancellor for development. Irwin is survived by his wife, Helen, and three sons.

Ray Birnie Johnson Jr.

died of unknown causes on December 29, 1992. At Dartmouth he played football and was in DKE. He served in the naval reserves 1954-56 and earned his M.B.A. at Harvard in 1958. He had a career in banking, and at the time of the 25th reunion he was a vice president at the First National Bank in St. Louis, Mo. Ray is survived by his wife, Roberta, and two daughters.

1955

Roy Peter Kernaghan

died of cancer on December 12, 1992, in Salisbury, Md. Pete was a biology professor at Salisbury State University and had a long career in the fields of genetics and cell biology at Salisbury, Bates College, and the State University of New York at Stony Brook. In addition to his teaching duties at Salisbury, Pete served as chairman of the Biological Sciences Department, director of the Division of the Allied Health Sciences, and special assistant to the vice president of academic affairs. He authored a number of articles and was a member of the Genetics Society of America, the American Genetic Association, and the American Association for the Advancement of Science. After earning both a bachelor's and master's at Dartmouth, Pete received his Ph.D. from the University of Connecticut and a postdoctoral fellowship at the Columbia University College of Physicians and Surgeons. He is survived by his wife, Gloria.

Joseph Albert Thoma Jr.

of Pittsburgh, Pa., died January 12 following a lengthy illness. Joe came to Dartmouth from the Peddie School, majored in economics, and was a member of Kappa Sigma. He is survived by his daughter Jennifer.

1959

John R. Capper

died of bone cancer in May 1992 in a Seattle, Wash., hospital after a lengthy illness. He was a resident of Baltimore and had lived in Annapolis. John came to Dartmouth from Michigan, majored in philosophy, and was a member of C&G and the ski team.

John served as an officer in the navy before continuing his education at both the University of Michigan and Michigan State in the fields of forestry and natural resources.

He is described as a stalwart soul and a top-notch environmentalist who served the State of Maryland in a variety of roles, mostly dealing with natural resources. His last role was