1951

Donald G. Neill

died March 17, 1992, at the Maine Veteran's home after a long illness. Don came to Dartmouth following WW II service with the marines in China, where he was a translator, interpreter, and intelligence expert. In the fifties he returned to China with the CIA. Don was a voracious reader with astounding recall and a superb raconteur. He could hold forth with anyone on virtually any subject, and did so in a most entertaining fashion as official greeter for the Ogunquit Lobster Pound Restaurant during the last 25 years of his life. He is remembered by his SAE brothers for his four-hour speech on the sex life of a flea, given on the Green in response to a hazing challenge. An original, Don will be missed.

1952

died in May 1992 in his adopted state of California. He had hoped to move back to New England someday. He was the 1952 undergraduate class secretary for three years, a modified art major, and a member of Phi Lambda Phi.

Following an Air Force tour in Germany, Tom earned a degree in civil engineering from Howard University in 1962 and received an M.B.A. from California State in 1974.

He worked for the Rocketdyne division of the North American Aviation Company, and then as a manager of quality engineering at Hughes Aircraft Company, both in California. He retired in 1990.

Tom is remembered by many as a popular figure at Dartmouth who made many positive contributions to his class and later to his community. He is survived by three daughters.

James J. Flom

died in early January after a short battle with lung cancer. "Dr. Lom," as he was affectionately known by his classmates, was an avid competitor, a trait he developed while starring in football, track and swimming at Grosse Pointe High School. He was on the swimming and track teams at Dartmouth and was a very active member of Beta Theta Pi.

After graduation Jim earned an M.B.A. from the University of Michigan. He entered the accounting field with Ernst and Ernst and became a CPA.

In the mid 1960s, he began a very successful career as a loan officer at Michigan National Bank, where he was employed at the time of his death.

Jim is survived by his wife, Joan, two sons, a daughter, two stepsons, a stepdaughter, and his father, Fred J. Flom.
