lege of Medicine and received his surgical training at Walter Reed Army Hospital in Washington, D.C.

Arthur served at various military hospitals, including Germany and Vietnam. In 1956, while he was back at Walter Reed, he was on the team that performed surgery on President Eisenhower and later on John Foster Dulles. He was chief of the department of surgery at Letterman Army Hospital when he retired from the army. After that he ran the surgical training program at St. Mary's Hospital in San Francisco and retired in 1986.

Arthur had a distinguished reputation in his field, and was also a golfer and an international fly fisherman who played the piano and painted in oils. He is survived by his wife, Dorothy, daughter Leslie, and son Robert.

Aaron Allen Hand

died of cancer on June 22 in Greenwich, N.Y. Tuss entered Dartmouth from the Kent School. After his sophomore year he transferred to Cornell to pursue his interest in agriculture.

While at Dartmouth Tuss was a member of the crew and of Phi Kappa Psi. He served in the army during World War II, returning to Greenwich to run the Hand Melon Farm. Although melons brought him fame, he also ran a large dairy, chicken, and grain operation. Tuss's Red Hand melons were world class and President Eisenhower joined many others in praising his crop.

Tuss was a director of Mary McClellan Hospital, on the advisory board of the Home City Savings Bank, and an early member of the Easton Tower Planning Board. He is survived by his wife, Carol, six children, and one grandson.

An interview of Tuss in DAM in 1975 sums up his philosophy: "I love the soil, and I love working it and watching it."

of Leawood, Kans., died at home June 12 of bone cancer. He was recently retired after 20 years as a manufacturer's representative with W. T. Leonard & Associates in Kansas City, Mo.

Bill came to Dartmouth from Webster Groves High School on athletic and scholastic scholarships. During World War II, he served in the air force as a first lieutenant, and returned to Hanover with his wife, Mary, after the war to obtain his degree. He was a member of Sigma Chi and sang in the Glee Club at Dartmouth. He pursued his fondness for music throughout his life as a member of the local church choir.

He is survived by his wife, Mary, two children, six grandchildren, and a brother, A. T. Hinson '42.

David Frederick Phillips

died on April 4, the result of a stroke. He had lived in Bethesda, Md., with his wife, Marta, who survives him.

Dave, a former Foreign Service officer, had been an expert in international exchange programs as assistant director of the Howard University Office of Student Services from 1965 until his retirement in 1984. According to Ashley Hawken, a U.S. Information Agency official and family friend, "Dave had a strong commitment to international understanding and has over the years helped thousands of students from Latin America and Asia."

Before joining Howard University Dave had been a USIA cultural affairs officer in Peru, Chile, and Ecuador. While serving in Peru, he had met Marta, who also worked with the USIA in the Latin America TV and films division.

At Dartmouth, Dave majored in art history and was a member of the Dartmouth Players and Cercle Français. He spent his junior year at the Sorbonne, and was a Reynolds Scholar for graduate studies at the University of Madrid. After college, Dave enlisted in the army and served in Germany as a counter-intelligence specialist from 1953-55.

Lloyd A. Richardson

died of complications during surgery on March 11 at the St. Joseph Mercy Hospital in Pontiac, Mich. He is survived by his wife, Corinne, and a brother. Lloyd had been ill for several years, undergoing a series of operations for osteoarthritis. During an earlier confinement, Corinne had been his nurse, a relationship from which grew into love and, in 1972, marriage.

At Dartmouth, Lloyd was an English major and active in the Dartmouth Players. During his senior year, he worked as a senior fellow on an Elizabethan drama project. After College, until 1960, Lloyd was vice president of Mt. Clemens Metal Products; later, until 1968, he held the same position with Rich-Wing Corporation. These firms serve the automotive industry in Michigan. He was also secretary-treasurer of the Richardson Foundation and the Rich-Kiss Placer Mining Company.

died on May 20 from an aneurysm of the aorta. Bob was raised in Scotch Plains, N.J. Following graduation, he continued to live in that state, most recently in Brielle, on the Manasquan River. He had been president of R. E. Scott Co., a mortgage banking firm founded by his father. He was also vice president for finance of K. Hovnanian Enterprises, builders and developers.

As an undergraduate Bob rowed on the lightweight crew and was a member of Alpha Delta Phi. As social chairman he continued the tradition of organizing celebrated AD social functions to which he introduced nationally recognized rock groups. On the more serious side, he was an active member of YAF. His interest in conservative politics continued. Recently, he had been appointed as a member of the Republican Task Force.

Bob was, perhaps, remembered best in his undergraduate days as a true individualist. In those days of button-down Oxford shirts and circle pins, Bob stood apart.

Bob is survived by his wife of 24 years, Barbara, and sons Robert, Charlie, and Steven.
