

as a supply officer. He completed an M.B.A. at the University of Michigan in 1959 and attended the Industrial College of the Armed Forces in 1969-70. In 1975 he retired to St. Croix but returned to serve as operations manager in material management for the University of California-San Francisco. He retired again in 1990. He was buried with full military honors in Arlington National Cemetery. He is survived by his wife, a daughter and a son, Brad '67.

1948

Allen Rogers Barrow Jr. came to Dartmouth in 1943 as a part of the Marine V-12 unit from Huntington School. He was drum major for the marching band. Returning to campus after Marine duty elsewhere, he completed his degree in history in 1949 and began a lifetime career in education at Newton, Massachusetts, High School. He was recalled by the USMC for the Korean War and settled in the Washington, D.C., area thereafter, adding an Ed.D. from George Washington University to the Ed.M. he had acquired earlier from Boston University. He became the director of adult education for the Fairfax County, Virginia, school board in 1960 and served on many boards and committees in that field. Allen was twice married and divorced, and was living at the Arleigh Burke Pavilion in McLean, Virginia, at the time of his death of cancer on July 20, 2004. He was proud of his Dartmouth heritage and always wore his class ring. He is survived by children Allen, Cynthia, Melannie, Andrew and Matthew.

George Ryan Michalek died on September 16, 2002. He came to Dartmouth in July 1944 from Springfield, Massachusetts, Classical High School before going into the Navy early in 1945. On his return he joined Kappa Sigma and wrote for Jack-O-Lantern, majoring in psychology and graduating in 1949. He spent his next few months in Texas leasing oil land before returning to the Northeast to work for advertising agencies in Philadelphia and Detroit. He then became a sugar company officer in Havana, before returning to New York and working in wholesale kitchen and tableware at the time of our 25th reunion. George moved on to management consulting for the rest of his working career. He reported that his first two semesters on campus kept Nelson Wormwood busy. He credits Dartmouth with providing the scope that helped greatly as a management consultant. His wife, Jane, survives him.

1950

Robert Marion Oliver Jr. died on June 4, 2004. He had been living in Scottsdale, Arizona. Bob came from Harwinton, Connecticut, and graduated from Lower Merion High School. At Dartmouth he majored in English drama and was active in the Players, WDBS and NROTC. After graduation he served in the Navy, attended the American Institute for Foreign Trade and worked for the Insurance Co. of North America. Bob is survived by his wife, Beverly, and two children.

1951

Laurence Webb Howard Jr. died on June 14, 2004, at home in Jacksonville, Florida, after an extended illness. Born and raised in Jacksonville, he prepared for Dartmouth at London High School, was an SAE, worked for The Dartmouth and was a Rufus Choate Scholar. He attended Tuck during his senior year, entered the U.S. Army and was commissioned a second lieutenant in January 1953. After leaving the service he joined his father in the family's feed business. He was a past president of the Florida Feed Dealers Association, a member of the Downtown Rotary of Jacksonville, past president of the Jacksonville Speech and Hearing Clinic, member of the Florida Yacht Club and a communicant of St. Ozark's Episcopal Church. He is survived by his wife of 42 years, Lanessa McMillan Howard; sons John, Laurence III and Robert; daughter Carol; and five grandchildren.

Joseph Thomas Manganelli died on August 5, 2004, at the St. Elizabeth Medical Center in Utica, New York, after a long illness. Born in Utica, Joe graduated from T.R. Proctor High School, played freshman football at Dartmouth and majored in chemistry-zoology. He obtained a law degree from the Albany Law School of Union University in 1955. While in law school he married Dolores Fragetta and went on to enjoy a long career as a lawyer, a profession in which he earned great respect and achieved notable success. He retired in 1995. Between 1983 and 1995 he served as the N.Y. State Estate Tax Attorney for Oneida County. An avid golfer, Joe was a club champion at the former Higby Hills Golf Club. He was a communicant of St. John the Evangelist Church in New Hartford. He is survived by his wife, Dolores, and daughters Claudia and Diana.

Warren "Pinky" Pfaff died on March 10, 2004, at the Rosenthal Hospice Center in Stamford, Connecticut, after a 10-month battle with lung cancer. His ashes were scattered on the lawn in front of the C&G house on August 11, according to his son, Chris. Pinky majored in American literature and joined Sigma Nu and Casque & Gauntlet. His artistic talents were utilized by Aegis, Jack-O-Lantern, Dartmouth Alumni Magazine and The Dartmouth. A painting fellowship in Paris preceded a three-year tour of duty in the U.S. Navy as a lieutenant on a minesweeper. His lifelong career in advertising included many famous ad slogans, such as the Marine Corps' "We're looking for a Few Good Men." Surviving are his wife, Kathryn; children Fred, Chris, Kelvin, Sandy and Margaret; and three grandsons.

Donald Hadley Rand died of heart failure at home in Pensacola, Florida, on April 3, 2004. Raised in Fountain City, Tennessee, he prepared for Dartmouth at Central High School. Don majored in sociology-psychology, was a member of Green Key and president of the Dartmouth Band, performed with the Handel Society and was in the Barbary Coast Orchestra. Returning home, he obtained a master's degree in sociology from the University of Tennessee in 1953. He then began a 30-year career in the U.S. Navy, marrying Barbara ("Barby") just before enlistment. Duty stations were worldwide but his favorite was at Corry Station in Pensacola. After retiring in Pensacola with the rank of captain he became a landlord with rental properties and enjoyed traveling, tennis, bridge and his children and their children. Surviving Don is Barby; daughters Donna, Leslie, Susan and Melanie; six grandchildren; and two great-grandchildren.

1952

Philip Spaulding Chapell ruled the Theta Chi ping-pong table with his wicked backhand. His varsity soccer teammates attest to equally tricky foot action. Phil died at home in Fairfield, Connecticut, on September 22, 2004. He had a long and successful career with General Electric, from graduation to his retirement in 1995. Phil was involved for years giving his special skills to church and community programs. He is survived by his wife, Allison, son Philip Jr. and two grandchildren. Contributions in Phil's memory may be made to the Dartmouth College Scholarship and sent to the Dartmouth College Fund.

Alan N. Cohen died on August 10, 2004, of pulmonary fibrosis at his home in Boca Raton, Florida. Alan came to Dartmouth from Passaic, New Jersey, but left the College after his sophomore year and graduated from Columbia University followed by Columbia Law School. Alan rapidly became a very important figure in the sports and entertainment businesses. As an executive vice president of Warner Communications he ran that firm's recorded music subsidiaries. At the same time, with partners, he bought the New York Cosmos professional soccer team. In 1983 Alan and two partners bought the Celtics basketball team, which they ran for 10 years with great success before selling it. Alan was also chairman and CEO of Madison Square Garden, at that time the owners of the New York Knicks and the New York Rangers. He also owned a major interest in the New Jersey Nets as well as a television channel and radio station in Boston. He leaves behind his wife, Carol, and three grandchildren.

Robert D. Rieman, M.D., died on August 11, 2004, of Parkinson's disease at the Hollywood (Florida) Medical Center. Like many of his classmates, Bob came to Dartmouth from Evanston Township High School in Evanston, Illinois. He was an English major and a member of Gamma Delta Chi. After graduating from Northwestern University Medical School, Bob married Helen Fitzpatrick and moved to Ft. Lauderdale, Florida, where he was in practice as an orthopedic surgeon. He retired in 1988. Bob was a skilled aircraft pilot, an accomplished skier and a lover of classical music. His wife predeceased him, and he is survived by sons Charles, Christopher and Thomas.

Howard W. Whitaker Jr. lost a three-year battle with cancer and died on August 13, 2004, at his home