business, E.S. Adkin time of his death wa firm. He was very ac on Maryland's easte boards of St. Mark's Way, and the Memor just a few. He was also a member of the Masonic Lodge, the Talbot County Country Club, and the Chesapeake Bay Yacht Club.

Sam is survived by his wife Martha, three children, and four stepchildren, to whom the class extends its sincere sympathy.

We belatedly report the death of JOHN HANS BIEL at his home in Lake Bluff, Ill., on May 15, 1977. Billy majored in chemistry and, following graduation, earned an M.S. and a Ph.D. from the University of Michigan. He then started a long and distinguished career in chemistry. He joined the Aldrich Chemical Company of Milwaukee in 1947 as a senior research chemist and left that firm in 1969 as vice president and director of research and development. That same year he joined Abbott Laboratories in Chicago as vice president in charge of experimental therapy. Two weeks prior to his death, Billy had returned to Aldrich as vice president.

He was the author of numerous scientific articles on drugs relating to chronic diseases, the holder of more than 85 drug patents, a frequent lecturer at Illinois College of Medicine and Marquette University, and was named a distinguished alumnus of the University of Michigan in 1976.

Surviving are his wife Shirley, three sons, and a daughter.

WILLIAM BRADFORD PERRY died at his home in East Falmouth, Mass., on November 15, 1979, following a long illness.

Bill entered Dartmouth from New Bedford High School and during his college years was a member of Sigma Alpha Epsilon, the Interfraternity Treasurer's Council, and the DOC. Shortly after graduation, Bill enlisted in the Army Air Corps and three-and-a-half years later saw him as a sergeant major with the 500th bomb group on the island of Saipan. Following the war, he entered Andover Newton Theological School, from which he received his bachelor of divinity degree in 1949. Bill had served parishes in Vermont and New Hampshire, and at the time of his death he was the assistant minister of the Waquoit Congregational Church in Waquoit, Mass.

The class extends sympathy to his wife Sylvia and their five children.

SUMNER ALETT ARNESON died on January 2 in Harwich, Mass., after a long and debilitating illness. He had been retired since 1960.

Sumner entered Dartmouth from Scarsdale High School and was a member of Chi Phi fraternity. After graduation he operated his own wool brokerage firm for eight years; following brief ventures in the mail order and municipal bond businesses, his physical disabilities brought about an early retirement.

He is survived by his wife Leonora, a son, and a daughter. The deepest sympathy of his classmates is extended to each of them.

The sympathy of the class is extended belatedly to the family of JESS BARNUM HAWLEY, who died on June 10, 1978, in Orlando, Fla.

Upon leaving Dartmouth, Jess established his own consulting firm in St. Charles, Ill., and subsequently relocated in Florida.

He is survived by his wife Louise.

The class was saddened to learn of the death of DONALD WILLIAM KINGSBURY. He died suddenly on December 17, 1979, at his office in Manchester, N.H. Don and his wife Eva had lived in East Manchester. At

ROBERT LIVINGSTON COON, a professor of French and head of the Department of Modern Languages at Kansas State University in Manhattan since 1971, died on December 9, 1979.

After graduating from Dartmouth, Bob received his M.A. in 1953 and Ph.D. in 1961 from Princeton University. From 1953 to 1955, he was in the U.S. Army. Before joining the K.S.U. faculty in 1971, he taught at the University of Southern California and at Vassar College and chaired the Modern Languages Department at Sweet Briar College.

Bob was a national leader in the testing and evaluating of language students. He authored a nation-wide testing program through the College Entrance Examination Board of the Educational Testing Service in Princeton, N.J., and for almost ten years he served as chief reader (director) for ETS's Advanced Placement Examination in French. In that capacity, he analyzed testing methods, helped to revise national testing standards, and introduced new evaluative techniques. Bob was a member of the Modern Language Association, the Renaissance Society, the American Association of Teachers of French, and the American Association of University Professors.

He is survived by his wife Joan and four children.

Members of the class were saddened recently when they learned of the untimely death of THEODORE FOUCAR EBERLE on November 13, 1979. Ted was in Hanover with his wife Ann at 51's 25th reunion several years ago, when he enjoyed a pleasant visit with his friends and classmates. This a difficult obituary to write, as it deals with a life so full of promise during college days, but one that did not turn out according to logical expectations.

Ted was born and grew up along the banks of the Ohio River in the city of Cincinnati. He lived there for the major portion of his lifetime, excluding his years at Dartmouth, a brief stint in the Air Force, and several years in upstate New York.

"Fouc," as he was sometimes affectionately called by his Dartmouth colleagues, was a cheerful, bright, and industrious student. He graduated cum laude from Dartmouth and received his M.B.A. from the Tuck School. He was an excellent athlete — one of only five varsity football players in his class to win his "D" for three consecutive years. He played both ways: as an offensive tackle who could block well and as a strong defensive lineman. He won honorable mention all-Ivy in both his junior and senior years. During his graduate year at Amos Tuck School, he served as a freshman football coach under Tuss McLaughry.

Furthermore, Ted was a member of the first Dartmouth rugby team, which played its opening game in the Bermuda College rugby tournament without the benefit of ever playing the sport before.

Ted will be remembered by those of us who knew him during our undergraduate days for his generosity and friendly manner.
