David E. Kinney died on October 5, 2002, at the Salem, Massachusetts, Hospital, having lived in nearby Marblehead since 1974. After graduating from Providence, Rhode Island, Country Day School he briefly attended Brown University and served in the Navy in the Mediterranean and Pacific theatres. Dave was a member of SAE and majored in English literature. He spent his business career in the insurance industry, living in Connecticut and Rhode Island as well as Massachusetts. He was an avid outdoorsman and sailor, hunting and fishing in Iceland and Canada, as well as participating in offshore races, including several from Newport to Bermuda and Annapolis to Newport. Dave was a cousin of classmates Sandy and Neil McCulloch. Other Dartmouth relatives were H. Hersey Johnson '25, Norman McCulloch '17 and Carl Wilson '35. He leaves son David, three sisters and a grandson.

Robert E. McConaughy died May 27, 2002. Bob came to Dartmouth from Valley Forge Military Academy and was living in Salt Lake City, Utah. At Dartmouth he was a member of Theta Delta. After graduation he worked for 15 years in commercial investment real estate and then operated a guest ranch in Jackson Hole, Wyoming. He and his wife, Claire, had two daughters, Kim '80 and Carin '81. The family worked together, operating the JH Rodeo and a small cattle ranch in Idaho. They were avid skiers. Another Dartmouth relative was Robert E. McConaughy '21.

Lloyd Woodbury died on July 20, 2002. He had been living in Clinton, Massachusetts. Woody came to Dartmouth from Hillsboro, New Hampshire, and he majored in economics. He was a member of Chi Phi and Heriot. His business career was in banking and investments. He is survived by his wife, Elizabeth, and three children.

Thomas Hunter Clark died on September 28, 2002, after a teaching career that covered 48 years. Born in Omaha, Nebraska, and a product of its public schools, he entered Dartmouth with every intention to teach, majoring in education. After obtaining his master's degree in education at Columbia he held teaching posts at high school and junior high levels before arriving at Northeastern University in 1965. A professor of education for the next 35 years, he allowed that (in his own words) he had ample time for developing to the fullest whatever whim might cross his mind. That is, he sang, danced, acted, sailed, canoed, hiked, camped and "quite literally enjoyed life to the fullest." He was a Scoutmaster for 11 years, played the flute and sang in several choirs. He is survived by his wife, Patricia, and children Norman, Andrew, Letitia and Lisa.

Richard Kimball Hulbert died July 17, 2002, from Alzheimer's. Born in Jakarta, Indonesia, where his father worked for General Motors, Dick was a resident of Rye, New York, since 1940. He prepared for Dartmouth at Rye Country Day School and Taft Preparatory School. Five generations of him at Dartmouth. Eleazer Wheelock was a forefather. A member of Phi Sigma Kappa, Dick lettered on the squash team and played varsity tennis. After one year of Tuck he served two years in the Army, the last as a second lieutenant. After graduating from Tuck and a few years with Travelers Insurance, he joined Chemical Bank's auditing department. He carved out a 35-year career, the last 11 years as a senior V.P. and general auditor of the bank. He leaves his wife, Deborah, daughter Katharine and son Kimball.

Henry J. Bingham III died on October 13, 2002, in New York City. "Harry" came to Dartmouth from Albany, New York. A member of Chi Phi, Harry graduated from the Tuck School and after OCS served for three years in the Navy. He spent his working career in the financial area, starting at Spencer Trask & Co. as a securities analyst. By 1968 Harry was a general partner, vice president and a director of that firm. Following his convictions that gold was the only investment which could provide a true hedge against inflation and offer economic security, he moved to United Services Advisors in 1978 where he managed the firm's precious metals mutual funds. In 1984 Harry shifted over to Van Eck Associates, a New York firm specializing in gold and related securities. He was acknowledged as a world authority on gold investing. Harry lived in Rye, New York, and is survived by his wife, Marianne, three children and nine grandchildren.

Walter E. Grevatt died on November 20, 2002, at the Dartmouth-Hitchcock Medical Center, where he had been hospitalized for several weeks. Coming to Dartmouth from Glen Ridge (New Jersey) High School, Walt majored in Far Eastern civilization. After receiving a master's degree in ethics at Oberlin he went on to earn a degree in divinity at the University of Chicago. He was ordained as a Protestant minister. Walt served as pastor of several small churches and then began to devote himself to the impoverished. His career took him into the origination and management of anti-poverty programs in various major cities. Walt achieved national recognition for his work with Project HOPE in inner-city Cleveland. Twenty years ago Walt moved to Plainfield, Vermont, and became associated with the Lebanon social services agency. At the time of his death he was assistant director. Walt is survived by his wife, June, two sons, a daughter, and a brother, Ren '43.

A. William Hastings died on June 30, 2002, when an automobile crash claimed his life near his home in Minneapolis. The accident came only weeks after he attended his class's 50th reunion which, Bill told classmates, was one of the happiest times of his life. He came to Dartmouth from Minneapolis and was a history major and a member of Phi Sigma Chi. After graduating Bill spent three years as a Marine officer, following which he position of personnel director at Northland Co., a large financial services firm. Bill retired in 1994. After retirement Bill and Ruth traveled very extensively, visiting every continent except Australia. He was deeply committed to his church, which he served as a deacon and a trustee. Bill was active in Meals on Wheels and other volunteer jobs. Bill is survived by his wife, Ruth, son Bill '82, Th'84, two daughters and four grandchildren.

Roger R. Phillips died on November 19, 2002, of colon cancer, a disease he had fought off for eight years. He came to Dartmouth from Pelham, New York, Memorial High School. After graduating as a government major Roger attended Harvard Law School and then served for three years as a Navy legal officer. He then went on to work in patent and corporate law, eventually deciding that he preferred the business world. In 1982, together with a few associates, Roger took over the Bailey Co., a failing auto parts manufacturer. Under Roger's presidency the firm became profitable, paid down its debt and grew enormously. It was sold in 1996 (for what Roger subsequently described as "a bundle") and he retired. Roger and Judy, his wife of 47 years, lived in New Canaan, Connecticut. They also had a winter home in Vero Beach, Florida. He is survived by his wife and sons Roger Jr. '78, James '80 and Charles.

Richard Sprague Danforth died on August 7, 2002, at Dartmouth-Hitchcock Medical Center. He came to Dartmouth from Nashua, New Hampshire, High School. At Dartmouth Dick was a member of Phi Kappa Psi and the Dartmouth Christian Union. He lettered in track. He served in the Air Force for two years and retired as a major in the Air Force Reserves. In 1960 Dick received a master's degree in city planning from the University of Pennsylvania. He was an urban redevelopment specialist working in Buffalo, New York, where he reshaped the downtown and waterfront areas. In Chelsea, Massachusetts, he helped to develop Admirals Hill. Dick also authored master plans for Saratoga Springs, New York, Dartmouth College, New England College and Newtown, New York. In retirement, he worked as a docent at the New Hampshire Historical Society and the Kearsarge Indian Museum. Dick is survived by his wife, Nicole; children Heidi, Scott and James and stepchildren Kim and David.

Edwin Jack Godfrey died on April 12, 2002, in San Diego. He entered Dartmouth from Montclair, New Jersey, High School. At Dartmouth Jack was a member of Beta Theta Pi, Vigilantes and the Interdormitory Council. He was also a member of the varsity football team. He received a master's in Russian civilization from Georgetown. Jack was commissioned a second lieutenant in the Marines in 1954, serving for 35 years, rising to the rank of lieutenant general, serving most of his career in senior positions throughout the Pacific and Far
