

worked in various executive positions in the New England Telephone Company, retiring in 1982 after 35 years of service. Dave was an active alumnus who served on the class executive committee for the past seven years. His wife, Mary survives him, as well as four children, including Kevin '69.

John Eckhoff Jr.

died of lung cancer in Gainesville, Fla., on June 28. John came to Dartmouth from Rockville Centre, N.Y. He served in the navy during WW II as an Air Service pilot. He owned and operated a restaurant and cabin colony in Ossipee, N.H., and recently moved to Florida in retirement. John is survived by Ruth, his wife of 50 years, and four children.

Louis Alonzo Young

died in Bryn Mawr, Penn., on July 25 after a valiant fight of several years with debilitating ailments. Lou was class president from 1940 to 1946 and was football captain of the memorable team that upset nationally ranked Cornell despite a fifth-down error by the referee. Lou served in the war as a navy lieutenant commander. He then settled down in the Philadelphia area, where he and Barbara raised four children while both maintained very active roles in Dartmouth alumni affairs. Lou was class treasurer for almost 20 years and in 1980 received an Alumni Award.

Lou spent most of his working years in charge of sales for an architectural engineering firm, Alexander Ewing Associates in Philadelphia. He is survived by Barbara, four children including Louis '70, and two brothers, H. Stewart '50 and John '47.

1943

John H. Berkley

died June 27 in Stuart, Fla. John entered Dartmouth from Harrisburg Academy. He attended the University of Virginia after leaving Dartmouth. During WW II he served in the Army Air Corps. John had retired from Virginia's Department of Labor and Industry. He was a member of St. Gregory's Episcopal Church and is survived by three sons, Thomas H. Jr. and Robert W., both of Harrisburg, and John H. Jr. of Keene, N.H.; also a sister, Virginia Detweiler, and two grandchildren.

Arthur B. Bucknam Jr.

of Salem, Ore., died of severe emphysema and cancer of the throat on June 18. Art and Frances had lived in San Jose, Calif., for 17 years, retiring to Salem in 1991 to be closer to their daughter Anne. An officer in the Maritime Service in World War II, Art saw duty and was discharged as a Lt. commander in 1946.

Entering Dartmouth from Crosby H.S. in Waterbury, Conn., he majored in economics and was a member of Theta Chi. His father also graduated from Dartmouth, class of 1910.

Art specialized in production control and belonged to the American Production and Inventory Control Society. He is survived by his wife and daughter.

1945

James Reardon Montgomery Jr.

of Santa Barbara, Calif., died December 18, 1991. He entered Dartmouth from Elgin (Ill.)

Academy and was on The Dartmouth's staff. In 1942 he entered the Navy Air Corps. He was discharged in 1945 as a lieutenant (j.g.), returning to Dartmouth. His career was in printing and publishing, and his most recent position was vice president of marketing for Day and Night Graphics Inc. in Carpenteria, Calif. He attended the class's 40th reunion.

He is survived by his widow, Barbara, two daughters, and three sons.

1947

William J. Childs

of East Bridgewater, Mass., died of a sudden illness at home on September 10. He entered Dartmouth from Quincy High School and later earned a degree from the New England Conservatory of Music. He served in the Marine Corps in WW II.

He was employed as an industrial engineer for the Titleist Golf Division of Acushnet Co. until his June 1990 retirement. He was an accomplished musician and served several of the South Shore churches, including St. John's Church in East Bridgewater, as choirmaster and organist. He was also into Barbershop and Sweet Adeline singing.

His first wife, Dorothy, died in 1971, and a daughter Constance died in 1991. William is survived by his second wife, Rita.

Fred Arthur Ruoff of Longwood, Fla., died May 19 after a courageous two-year struggle with colon cancer. Fred served in the marine corps during WW II, entering Dartmouth after that service, and graduating cum laude with an English major. He also earned an M.A. degree at Rutgers. He taught school for two years, worked for the American Red Cross in Europe, and then at Travelers Insurance Co. in Hartford for five years. He then entered the field of banking as VP of Human Relations in Worcester, Mass., and remained there until his retirement to Florida and to Newfound Lake, N.H., in 1985.

Fred was very active in various Dartmouth clubs for 35 years, serving in Worcester and in Florida as enrollment officer, chairman of programs and seminars, and president.

He is survived by his wife, Mary, two daughters, a son, and four grandchildren.

1950

John L. Carleton

died at his home in Hendersonville, N.C., on June 26 after a recurring illness. John came to Dartmouth from Denver via Kimball Union Academy and the army. He left Dartmouth and graduated from the University of Missouri School of Journalism. He worked for the Chicago Tribune and a WGN Radio subsidiary, then became editor of the Wausau Insurance Company Magazine. He continued working in writing and advertising in the U.S. and France for many years. He is survived by his brothers Frank '46 and Fred '53.

1951

Frank Ulrichs Jr.

died suddenly June 17 in a hospital near his lifelong home town of Norwich, N.Y. "Inky" came to Dartmouth from Norwich High School. He was a member of Chi Phi and was active in many intramural sports. Upon graduation he entered Naval Officers' School in Newport, R.I., and finished first in his class. He served five years as a lieutenant. After his discharge, Frank earned a degree from Brooklyn Law School and practiced in the New York City area for several years. He later moved back to upstate New York where he owned and operated the Binghamton Insurance Claims Agency. At the time of his death, Frank was in the real-estate business in Norwich. He was always a supporter of Norwich athletics, and the high school's stadium was built thanks to the efforts of Frank, his mother, and his brother, after whom it was named. Frank is survived by his wife, Veronica, six children, six grandchildren, and his sister Gertrude Cheatham of Las Vegas.

1986

Martin J. Kryska

was killed in a car accident September 13 in Utah. Martin grew up in Palo Alto, Calif., and came to Dartmouth as an alpine skier. He later switched to Nordic and was a very active member of the ski team. He also loved the Outing Club and was a good rock and ice climber. After graduation he continued to compete in ski races all over the country and was pegged by some as an Olympic "dark horse." Martin earned a master's in engineering at Thayer. He merged his interests in skiing and engineering by developing a new kind of rollerski for use in cross-country ski training.

Martin had recently been pursuing his interests in furniture and woodworking in Aspen, Colo. He also received patents for a bicycle transmission train and mechanical crouches. Martin leaves behind many family members, including his mother and stepfather, and a plentitude of friends and acquaintances whose lives he touched. A memorial service was held at Moosilauke on October 18. Memorial contributions may be made to the Appalachian Mountain Club, 5 Joy St., Boston, MA, 02108.

1990

Brian F. Hayes

died of cancer August 9 at his home in Melrose, Mass. A government major, he was editor of The Dartmouth, a Big Brother, and a David's House volunteer, where he spoke with the families of children with cancer. He was a manager of the baseball team and a Rufus Choate Scholar.

Brian wrote an article about his struggle with cancer for The New York Times Magazine in March 1991. He wrote for several other newspapers including the Times, The Valley News, and the Manchester Union Leader.

His main aim in life was to graduate from Dartmouth. Despite setbacks that kept him away for long periods, he was only five courses short of his goal when he died.

Brian leaves his parents, G. Frederick and Shirley M. Hayes, and a sister, Cheryl A. Hayes. Memorial donations may be made to the Melrose Visiting Nurses, 50 Tremont St., Melrose, MA 02176, or the Dana-Farber Cancer Institute, 44 Binney St., Boston, MA 02115.