

VERMONT Condominiums Quechee Lakes

Two units have been placed with us for resale. Ownership includes share of Landowner owned country club with all facilities. Near Woodstock, Vermont.

FOUR SEASON AREA

Units, selling below market value.

Rental Program

Write for free brochure about vacation rentals.

QUECHEE REALTY LTD.
Box 570K, Quechee, Vt. 05059
802 - 295-9555

HANOVER

New 4 bedroom, 2½ bath cape on 3.3 +/- acres offering the privacy of country living with the convenience of Hanover amenities. Home has many extras including 2 fireplaces, central vacuum system, two car garage, and all the storage one would need. This is a home of distinction for the discriminating buyer. $125,000.

Offered exclusively by

REALTOR®

N.H.-Vt. Multiple Listing Service

N.H. Associates:

Don Lemay — Roger Clarkson '75
33 So. Main Street, Hanover, N.H. 03755
(603) 643-5374

*Mildred
Clarke
Realtor*

*Well-Developed Assoc.
R.F.D. 2
So. Royalton, Vermont 05068*

Quechee Lakes isn't the only place halfway between Woodstock and Hanover. Covenant-protected private lots 3 acres and up.

(802) 763-8181

TRUMBULL-NELSON Construction Co., Inc.

Public Buildings — Residences
If you are planning new construction, let us serve you with our trained craftsmen.
Skill-Integrity-Responsibility

200 Lebanon Street
Hanover, N.H. 03755
(603) 643-3658 (603) 643-3659

He leaves his widow Rhea of 3100 Dunbarton Drive N.W., Canton, four daughters, and two sons.

1947

JAMES CHRISTOS KYRIAKOS died May 3 at St. Joseph's Hospital in Lowell, Mass., at the age of 54, several weeks after suffering a severe stroke.

A native of Lowell, he attended Harvard College and Columbia University, was commissioned a Navy ensign at Dartmouth, and returned after the war to graduate cum laude. He was an office manager for the Remington Rand Office Machine Division.

James helped found St. George Greek Orthodox Church in Lowell and served on its original board of directors.

His wife, the former Mary Chiores, and five sisters survive.

RICHARD EARL WHIKEHART, senior vice president-engineering of the McDowell Wellman Engineering Company, died of leukemia June 2 in Cleveland, Ohio.

Dick came to Dartmouth with the Navy V-12 unit, having transferred from a similar program at Yale. After graduation, he earned master's degrees from both Case-Western Reserve and Harvard and for four years taught civil engineering at Case. He was a structural and soils engineer until 1958, when he joined McDowell Wellman. He became a vice president in 1967, a director in 1974, and senior vice president for engineering early this year.

Active in professional societies on the national and local level, he was the author of one book and several articles in professional journals. He was a Mason and a deacon of the First Baptist Church of Cleveland Heights.

Dick is survived by his widow Ruth, at their home, 31550 Gates Mills Blvd., Pepper Pike, Ohio; two sons and two daughters; a granddaughter; his mother, a brother, and two sisters.

1951

Jay Wolf was signed up to come to our 25th reunion, as he had to every previous one. Only this time his infectious smile, easy laugh, and exuberant personal warmth were missing. June 11, the Friday before, he died of a heart attack at his home.

Julius R. Wolf '51

Jay's career in the theater, films, and television, as casting director, producer, and theatrical agent, didn't fit the pre-Hopkins Center Dartmouth man stereotype. His Manhattan apartment was crammed with contemporary American art, most of which he acquired when the artists, many now famous, were relative unknowns. His empathy with people led him to seek out young talent in the black and regional theatres.

JULIUS ROSENTHAL WOLF, a native of Cincinnati, came to Dartmouth from that city's Walnut Hills High School. Jay was an English major, earned his "D" in crew, edited the Freshman Handbook, was editor-in-chief of The Green Book, and worked for Jack-O-Lantern and the Aegis.

In the fall of 1951, Jay landed in New York and spent three years in publishing, public relations, and advertising before deciding that the theater wasn't so unrespectable after all. For 14 years thereafter, he was a theatrical agent, ending up as a vice-president of General Artists, then the second largest agency in the world.

In 1968, Jay moved into casting for films and television. Among his most recent involvements were "Hester Street" and "The Adams Chronicles." Others included "Pueblo," "Antigone," "June Moon," "The Last of the Belles," and "Scott Fitzgerald in Hollywood." He also co-produced a Broadway play, did some TV production work, and wrote a few TV scripts.

At the time of his death, Jay was talent consultant, East Coast, for the American Broadcasting Company. He was a member of the Players Club, Friends of the Whitney Museum, the Municipal Art Society of New York, and the Chelsea Theater Center. A bachelor, Jay left no immediate survivors.

1955

The Class of 1955 is saddened to learn of the passing of ARTHUR FLANDERS BRANDT on March 25 in Fenton, Michigan. The cause of death was a brain tumor.

Art came to Dartmouth from Flint, Mich. He loved hunting and sailing and found time to do both in Hanover. He left Dartmouth at the end of his sophomore year, served in the Navy during the Korean conflict, and completed his studies at the University of Detroit, where he received his dental degree in 1960.

He practiced in Fenton from 1961 until his death. He was past president of the Genesee County District Dental Society and a member of the Michigan State Dental Committee on Legislation.

Service on the city council, the planning commission, and the park board led to his election in 1973 as mayor of Fenton, an office he held for two years. He had also been president of local and county historical societies and a member of the board of the Fenton Community Center.

He leaves his widow Nancy, two sons by a former marriage, two stepchildren, his parents, a grandmother, and two sisters.

Richard E. Whikehart '47