WALTER L. HETFIELD IV of Plainfield, N.J., died July 14, 1977. "Skip" was a native of Plainfield and graduated from Plainfield High School. At Dartmouth, he majored in economics and had belonged to Sigma Phi Epsilon.

Following two years active duty in Army Ordinance in Detroit, he was employed as cost accountant and comptroller for the Arthur Venneri Co., a general contractor of Westfield, N.J., for ten years. He was subsequently employed as a financial consultant with Kurt Rock Associates of Ridgewood, the United National Bank, Plainfield, and by North Jersey Landscaping, of Fairfield, N.J. He was a vestryman and treasurer of St. Stephen's Church, and had been active in Boy Scouts.

Since 1973, Skip had been under treatment for cancer, and in August 1977 was permanently disabled by the disease. Although he was bed-ridden during the final seven months of his illness, he maintained his calm and level-headed attitude, and bore his suffering with quiet grace and dignity. Unless one has actually experienced it, one can't possibly imagine the ordeal of watching a still-young man die of cancer. I know those who knew Skip will be saddened by his untimely death.

ELLIOTT KOFOED, 26, passed away on Sunday, November 27 at True Farm in Meriden, N.H., after a long fight against cancer. He is the son of Marilyn and William Kofoed '55 and the grandson of Miami Herald columnist Jack Kofoed.

He attended Miami Shores elementary school and North Miami junior and senior high school, where he was president of the student council. He was also a member of the swimming team. During high school, syndicated columnist Jim Bishop devoted an entire column to Elliott, exemplifying him as one of the country's future leaders.

Following graduation from North Miami High, Elliott entered Dartmouth College, where he was graduated with honors. It was at Dartmouth that he became intensely interested in ecology and the environment, and pursued — up to a few months before his passing — the fight against nuclear power plants, primarily the one being constructed in Seabrook, N.H.

Following graduation from Dartmouth, he worked in the social, agricultural, and environmental areas before taking a leave of absence for one year to achieve a life-long dream of visiting Central and South America. He departed from New Hampshire on a Vespa motor scooter and drove through most countries in Central and South America before returning to the United States.

In 1975, several months after recuperating from hepatitis, cancer was discovered. He underwent traditional chemotherapy, which failed to achieve notable results, and went to Mexico to try laetrile as well as alternate cancer therapies, which included natural foods and high vitamin dosages. For about a year, he experienced a remission. During that time, he lectured widely about cancer. He even obtained a court order allowing him to import laetrile legally into the United States for his own use.

Shortly after his return to New Hampshire, cancer broke out again, and the radiation treatments and extensive chemotherapy failed to achieve results.

Besides his parents and grandparents, Elliott is survived by two sisters and a nephew. Services and cremation were in Hanover, N.H.

In lieu of flowers, the family requests donations be made to the Elliott Kofoed Memorial Fund, Dartmouth College, Hanover, N.H.
