

Jack Allen Charter

Died: November 9, 2008

When he died on Sunday, November 9, 2008, Jack was 69 years old and lived in Nashua, New Hampshire.

He grew up Manchester, New Hampshire, where he went to high school, graduating cum laude. He was a member of the National Honor Society, on the yearbook, and played in the orchestra and band.

Little is known about his time at Dartmouth; he is not profiled in The Aegis his senior year. An obituary at the time of his death said, "his studies focused on mathematics."

Jack's 30-plus year career in the following years was spent in information technology, with positions at Honeywell, Sanders Associates, Health Plan of New England, and Harvard Pilgrim Health Care. A New Englander through and through, he had lived in Scituate, Rhode Island and Nashua, New Hampshire, and spent vacations on the Maine seacoast and New Hampshire lakes region.

Obituaries note he was an automobile enthusiast, an active bowler, and avid tennis player. Jack had two sons, Adam and Gareth, and a step-daughter, Emma.