

William Patrick Moorman

Died: December 21, 2007

Pat died of cancer on Friday, December 21, 2007 in California. He was 68 years old.

He had retired to Laguna Beach in 1995 from a career in international banking that had until that time situated him mostly in Minneapolis and Chicago

Pat grew up in Darien, Connecticut, where he went to high school. An honor society student, he was also on the student council and the yearbook, sang in the glee club, and was in dramatics. His high school sport was tennis.

At Dartmouth, Pat majored in English and attended Tuck School of Business on the 3-2 program. In his freshman year he played tennis, and was in dormitory government for two years. He graduated from the college in 1961 and from Tuck in 1962.

Little is known about his life in the years after he left Hanover. Apart from address listings in our 25th (when in 1986 he was living in Minneapolis), no information about his career or life has been provided. Only brief information about his death appears to have been furnished to the college by his family, indicating the 1995 move to the West coast for retirement.

He had two children, Renata and Heinz.
