

May 28, 2024 Letter #1

Dear Classmates, Spouses, and Friends

Announcing the May 28, 2024 Virtual Mini-Reunion!

Mark your calendars for our next Class of 1961 virtual mini-reunion on Tuesday, May 28, 2024. As usual, we will begin at 11:30 AM Eastern for a half-hour of open mike. The “official” program will begin at noon Eastern, and we will conclude by 3:30 or 4:00 PM Eastern. The program will include two classmate panels, this year’s Bosworth Awardees from the Dickey Center, and a presentation from an Associate Professor of Psychiatry from the Geisel School. There will also be a women’s session led by Nyla Arslanian and Patti Rich.

Registration is Open!

Please register today!. As before, we will be using the Zoom platform, there are no fees for attending and we look forward to a high turnout. To register, click on the Registration button below or copy and paste in your browser:

REGISTRATION BUTTON

Meeting ID 937 7477 0936
Passcode 075172

After registering, you will receive a confirmation email containing information about joining the meeting.

Dickey Center Bosworth Awardees

This spring the Dickey Center has given the Bosworth Award to four students, and they will be participating in our mini-reunion. Each are members of the class of 2025.

As you will recall, the Stephen W. Bosworth Award in International Affairs is awarded each year by the John Sloan Dickey Center for International Understanding to two or more students who have demonstrated excellence in their work at the Center. Named in honor of our classmate, Steve, the prizes are fully funded through the Robert Frost Endowment fund, which was the Class of '61 project leading up to our 60th reunion.

(Note to Harris: put in the pictures wherever most appropriate.)

Alejandra Carrasco is a Dartmouth student from Lima, Peru. She studies Sociology modified with Latin American and Caribbean Studies at Dartmouth. Alejandra is Senator and Communications Director at the Student Government. She's also the Co-director of the Latina and Caribbean Council, Vice president of The Women's Network at Dartmouth, and former member of the Magnuson Student Leadership Board. She is also part of the FYSEP community and King Scholars. Before joining Dartmouth, she was former CEO—now Ambassador and co-founder of Wawa Laptop, the first eco-friendly laptop made in Peru. Also, Alejandra co-founded the NGO AEPEX (Peruvian student's abroad association) to democratize the information for low-income students about the application process to colleges in the US. During her freshman summer she interned at CARE International in Peru's headquarters to implement projects for the program "Niñas con oportunidades". Finally, she is part of the cohort of Global health and development interns and interned for The World Bank in the Global Partnership for Social Accountability this past summer. Alejandra will travel to Africa with the organization Team4Tech to teach students how to use the technology on a daily basis.

Abby Kambhampaty is a junior from Upstate New York, double majoring in Biology and Anthropology. She is passionate about advancing public health and healthcare access for migrant and housing-insecure individuals, as well as the intersections of climate justice and public health. On campus, she is the leader for the Center for Social Impact's immersion service trip to the U.S.-Mexico border, one of the Dickey Center Global health interns, a member of Great Issues Scholars her freshman year, an Arctic innovations scholar at the Dickey Center, a Global Health Fellow, and is part of the Dartmouth Coalition for Global Health, a student group on campus. She also did an impactful internship at the Upper Valley Haven. She also works as a writing center tutor, does biomedical research on the sociodemographic determinants of HIV and loves to run and swim! Outside of Dartmouth, Abby has spent time interning at Boston Healthcare for the Homeless and the Yale Refugee Health program, furthering her passion for healthcare justice, which she intends to pursue after graduation.

Prescott Herzog is a '25 from Claremont, New Hampshire pursuing a degree in Government and History. Prescott is interested in the intersection of technology and human rights, with a particular focus on state responses to democratic protests. Prescott has previously interned at the YMCA of the USA's Government Affairs Office, and at the Office of Science and Technology Cooperation at the Department of State. At the Dickey Center, Prescott has been involved as a Student Assistant, a Great Issues Scholar, a War and Peace Fellow, an Arctic Innovation Scholar and as the Senior Publishing Editor for World Outlook. This coming summer Prescott has plans to go to Kosovo to work on international human rights law at the constitutional court of Kosovo as well as study for the LSATS. In his free time, he enjoys making Spotify playlists, kayaking, and spending time with friends on the green.

Madeleine Shaw is a '25 from Bloomington, Indiana majoring in Government and Russian with a minor in Arabic & Middle Eastern Studies. She is particularly interested in conflict resolution, human rights, and counterterrorism, and plans to pursue a career in diplomacy or intelligence. Madeleine interned at the State Department's Bureau of Near Eastern Affairs last spring and Exodus Refugee Immigration resettlement agency in winter 2022. Now a Presidential Research Scholar, Madeleine worked in Professor Lyall's Political Violence Field Lab during her first two years at Dartmouth and was selected to present and publish research at the Norwich University Peace & War Summit last year. She currently serves as Senior Editor of the World Outlook International Affairs Journal and Under Secretary-General of Dartmouth Model UN. She recently spent a term away from Dartmouth studying Arabic language and refugee policy in Amman, Jordan. When not at the Dickey Center, Madeleine can be found competing for Dartmouth's figure skating team, giving campus tours, or reading history novels at local cafes.