

DARTMOUTH '62/70 CHARLESTON CELEBRATION SOLD OUT

The Class 70th Birthday Celebration next May has been completely “sold out.” About 140 classmates, family, and friends will spend three days in Charleston seeing the sights and enjoying America’s best preserved historic city and the nearby Drayton Hall Plantation. We’ll enjoy a dinner cruise past Fort Sumter and celebrate a gala Birthday Dinner at Hibernian Hall, a site for the 1860 Democratic Convention. Our hotel, the 1853 Mills House, features the same marble floors paced by Robert E. Lee in the days leading up to the Civil War, but thanks to a recent multi-million dollar renovation it also has all modern amenities. We’ll have about twice the number attending our 70th Celebration in Charleston than we had at the 65th in New Orleans. Unfortunately, we have reached capacity at several of the locations we’ll be visiting and enjoying dinner. Class Tripmeister Tom Komarek regrets this problem, but points out he did not want to move Dartmouth ‘62/70 to a large hotel convention center. We’d be able to accommodate larger numbers, but we’d disappoint those who did attend.
