

Dan Morgenroth died February 27, 2006, of glioblastoma, an aggressive brain tumor. Dan was raised in Maumee, Ohio. A member of Psi Upsilon, Dan is best remembered as a member of Ham Sandwich, one of the premier campus bands. He received a Masters in Psychology from the University of Massachusetts, a PhD in Anthropology from the University of Chicago and an MBA from University of Toledo. After his educational journey, he returned to his hometown in Ohio. His professional career was in computer programming, including authoring a program called "Market QA", but Dan never lost his enthusiasm for music, performing in bands on and off until his final illness. He and wife Sue also had an abiding love for the outdoors, and camped and hiked in almost all of our National Parks and National Forests, and just before his final diagnosis biked across Missouri on the Katy Trail. He was invested in the joy of life: his slogan might have been "If it feels good tomorrow, do it today". He is survived by his wife Sue, two step children and five grandchildren.
